The Bronco Research Symposium is a celebration of academic excellence here at Fayetteville State University. This week long symposium will showcase the result of student’s scholarly, engaged, and creative research ventures. Conference participants represent a range of disciplines including social sciences, humanities, mathematics, life sciences and business among others. Participating in research provides an excellent preparation for graduate or professional schools.

Students are invited to submit an abstract for consideration. Research must be under the supervision of a faculty or professional in the field. Students present their research projects to faculty, staff and other conference participants either by oral or poster format. The oral presentation will allow students to give a 15 minute presentation of their topic and include time for questions. In the poster session, students will have designed a visual poster representing their research.

The event will take place on Sept. 14, 2012
